"The think tank for everyday democracy. We believe everyone should be able to make personal choices in their daily lives that contribute to the common good. Our aim is to put this democratic idea into practice by working with organisations in ways that make them more effective and legitimate....We focus on six areas: public services; science and technology ; cities and public space; arts and culture; global security, and public communication."

Two programmes available

"The Research Internship Programme - focussed on different project areas - is aimed at undergraduates and recent graduates who want to gain valuable research experience.

The Media and Communications Internship Programme is aimed at undergraduates and recent graduates interested in pursuing a career in journalism, public affairs, publishing, new media and related disciplines who want to gain experience working in a public policy environment."

The Research Internship Programme

- undergraduates and recent graduates of any discipline
- interested in current affairs and social policy, and want to gain valuable research experience
- assigned to one or more projects or a specific project areas
- responsibilities are likely to include: Desk based research; Papers and briefings (production of Demos' pamphlets, papers and briefings at all stages, from conception to the final draft.) Fieldwork -help out researchers in their range of research activities; Demos database and network; Events; New ideas; Office administration - tasks are shared between all interns through a rota system, so at the most you'll spend an hour per day on admin tasks.
- approximately seven or eight interns at any one time, alongside about twenty-five full time staff.
- Internships usually last for two or three months. Most are full-time but hours can be flexible and part-time internships also available. Whether you apply for a full-time or part-time internship will not affect your chances of selection.
